Nation's Last Tribute to Its Martyred Chief Executive.

State Funeral at the Capitol Attended by Representatives From All Over the World—Methodist Episcopal Service Was Simple, But Solemn—Eulogy by the Reverend Bishop Andrews of Ohio—Thousands View the Body as It Lay in State—Mrs. McKinley Did Not Attend State Funeral and Her Condition Is Causing Alarm—Remains of the Dead President Now on the Way to Canton.

Washington, Sept. 18.—All that the mortal of William McKinley is speeding to his last earthly resting place at Canton, Ohio, is the nation's last tribute to its martyred chief executive. The funeral services at the United States Capitol today were simple, but solemn. The body of the dead president lay in state in the rotunda, and thousands of people gathered around it to pay their last respects. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and were attended by a large number of clergymen and laymen. The eulogy was delivered by the Reverend Bishop Andrews of Ohio, and was a fitting tribute to the life and character of the dead president. The remains of the dead president are now on the way to Canton, Ohio, for burial.

TRIED AND TRUE.

Roosevelt Wants No Change Made in the Cabinet.

Asks Members to Stay With Him for the Whole Term—This They Were Not at Liberty to Decline—Again Reiterates His Determination to Continue the Policy of the Late President, Which He Said Was Outlined in the Speech at Buffalo Previous to the Tragic Occurrence of Sept. 6—Some of the Cabinet Members May Not Wish to Serve.

Washington, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon convened his first cabinet meeting held in Washington. At this meeting the president asked the members of Mr. McKinley's cabinet to remain with him for the whole term. He said that he was not at liberty to decline, and again reiterated his determination to continue the policy of the late president, which he said was outlined in the speech at Buffalo previous to the tragic occurrence of Sept. 6. Some of the cabinet members may not wish to serve.

The president then addressed his advisers collectively, as he had previously done individually, requesting them to remain with him for the whole term. He said that he was not at liberty to decline, and again reiterated his determination to continue the policy of the late president, which he said was outlined in the speech at Buffalo previous to the tragic occurrence of Sept. 6. Some of the cabinet members may not wish to serve.

The discussion turned upon the policy of the administration and Mr. Roosevelt announced that he regarded the speech of the late president at the Buffalo Pan-American exposition, the day previous to the tragic shooting, as outlining the policy to be followed by the administration. It cannot be learned at this time whether or not all the members will be willing to serve the full term.

EVERY PRECAUTION.

Being Taken to Guard the Czar's Life While Visiting in France.

Dunkirk, Sept. 18.—The preliminary festivities in connection with the czar's visit have passed without any untoward incident. The weather, however, has been atrocious. The most striking feature of yesterday's journey consisted in a full dress rehearsal of the military precautions taken for the czar's visit. A portion of the railroad which Emperor Nicholas will traverse this afternoon, between Dunkirk and Calais, was closed to the public, and the train was guarded by soldiers at intervals of 250 yards in specially pointed districts. Every station was guarded with troops. Every level crossing, even in the open country, was encircled by the military.

In the midst of this, sometimes without a solitary habitation in sight, there stood motionless a soldier in full uniform, dressed in the skin, closely watching the approach of the train. The czar's visit is being watched with great interest, and the military precautions are being taken with the utmost care.

FEIGNED INSANITY.

Arraigned on Murder Charge Colgoos Utters No Word.

Buffalo, Sept. 18.—Leon F. Colgoos was arraigned before Judge Emery in the county court yesterday afternoon on the indictment for murder in the first degree in the fatal shooting of President McKinley on Sept. 6. Again the prisoner refused to plead, or even to utter a word on his own behalf. Lewis, ex-prosecutor, entered a plea of not guilty. The accused will be tried in the supreme court next Monday.

Absolutely no demonstration having been made against the prisoner on Monday, the authorities decided that the strong guard was unnecessary yesterday. Colgoos was taken from the jail through the tunnel under Delaware Avenue to the city hall by Detective Solomon and Geary, being handcuffed to the latter.

Going from the basement of the city hall to the court, Colgoos was guarded by a black and white bunting with which the interior of the city hall was draped. This apparently made for the highest limit for a man in a prisoner, and he gave no more heed to them than he did to the questions of the court or the district attorney. The prisoner entered the court room at 10 o'clock. As soon as the handcuffs were removed from the prisoner, District Attorney Penney began the formal arraignment, and asked: "How do you plead, guilty or not guilty?"

Not a sound was uttered by the prisoner. He stood mute. His curly hair was disheveled, and although his face was white and clean, his disordered clothes and the growth of his beard gave him an unkempt appearance. Although his demeanor was still one of stubbornness, he gave a little more evidence of concern than upon his first appearance. When the prisoner refused to plead, the district attorney told him that he had been indicted for murder in the first degree, and that he could answer "yes" or "no." For an instant Colgoos glanced at Mr. Penney, and it was thought that he intended to speak, but he did not.

Hope Rises Often, to Fall as Quickly--Day of Intense Anxiety--President's Last Hours--Pathetic Story Told in Bulletins--His Old Pastor Prayed--Mrs. McKinley Was at His Bedside and Bore the Affliction with Great Fortitude--The President's Last Words Were Addressed to His Wife: "God's Will, Not Ours, Be Done"--Saturday in the House of Mourning--The Simple Service--Lying in State at the City Hall--80,000 Sorrowfully Gaze on the Beloved Dead.

symbol of sorrow. The black drapery of the city's streets marked the toll of the city's grief.

In the morning a simple service took place at the residence.

Major-General John E. Brooke, who was personally in command of all the forces participating in the funeral.

It was just eight minutes before the opening of the service when a covered caisson drove up to the house.

Within the house of death was a scene that will live in the memory of all who saw it.

from the doctors. Across the street from the house there were several hundred people waiting for news of the president's condition.

Word was received during the morning from the chief of the military and naval forces.

At a quarter before 11 o'clock President McKinley was taken to the city hall.

Some of the Advantages Possessed by the Ambidextrous Men and Women, or Those who can use either right or left hand with equal facility, are nearly as frequently met with as might at first be supposed--in fact, they are quite rare.

This double facility is, however, much more frequently met with in the case of men than in that of women.

Left-handed butchers are numerous, as is left-handedness in the case of our large market houses.

They will cut, saw and handle their meat without once changing it from one side to the other on the block or changing its own position.

In view of the many advantages derived from the ability to use both hands equally well, many people have endeavored to acquire this facility.

They all stick to the right-handed idea, however, and an old resident of Frankfort, noted for his ambidexterity, is at present at school through the use of his left hand in writing, although he was equally skillful as a penman with his right.

The benefits derived from the use of both hands were excellently illustrated in the experience of two carpenters who lived in Frankfort some years ago.

Their names were Cross and Walton, and the former was right-handed, the latter left-handed.

As they were also very tall and the very short, they made a curious couple, but they always worked together, laying floor joists, putting joists, work in building.

They could take the jobs of this character cheaper than any other, because they could work from either end and toward each other so handily.

Cross would square a floor board at one end and Walton would cut it off at the other end, working together from opposite ends, according to Philadelphia legend.

Left-handed mechanics are always at a disadvantage, as machinery is invariably adapted to people who work right-handed, but the ambidextrous man or woman is always at home in whatever work is undertaken.

QUANT AND CURIOUS.

The Saxons, whose original settlement is determined by the little kingdom of Saxony, derived their name from the sax, or short, crooked knife with which they armed themselves.

An old dining table at which Prince Charles died when he marched into England was exposed at a sale of household furniture at the Grosvenor Hotel, London, recently, and was knocked down at 30 shillings.

The word rail at first meant a brook, then was applied to the persons who lived on opposite sides and quarrelled about the water, and finally it was understood as applying to contestants for any desired object.

When the King of England goes abroad he does not jump on an ordinary train and take any vacant seat he can find. Instead of that he has his own business car, which has the third car of the train, Dr. Lock and his wife in the fourth. In this order four carriages preceded, bearing the president, members of the cabinet, the representatives of the military branch and the officiating clergymen.

After the four leading carriages there was a detachment of the military branch and the officiating clergymen.

Removing his hat, the president stepped from the vehicle and walked to the vestibule, where the hearse appeared the four horses were led slowly to the entrance. At the instant the hearse became stationary the playing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," began.

"Nearer, My God, to Thee." At the same time the rain came down in sheets. The casket was lowered into the caisson, and the president, with his hand on his forehead, stepped into the caisson.

Among the various proofs of the relics brought to London from Toulouse being the relics of St. Edmund is the fact that when the shrine at the time of the burning of the body of St. Edmund was found, the relics of St. Edmund were found in the same position as they were found in the shrine.

One of the most curious perquisites in connection with King Edward's coronation is the right of one of the peers to claim the bed and bedding used by the King when he is crowned. In old times this was a perquisite of considerable value, as the bedding was usually composed of richly embroidered coverlets of velvet or silk, with priceless hangings of cloth of silver and gold. Nowadays it is of little value.

In the village of Hirshach, near Aachen, Germany, there is a peculiar gate. In the year 1820 Ludwig Maximilian, a farmer, purchased the entrance of his garden two beech trees, which he united in one arch. Over this arch the casket was carried.

Today the whole in its blooming green days is a sight to behold. The arch is made of two beech trees, which are united in one arch. Over this arch the casket was carried.
